

Ayurveda Wellness – Preparing for Your Journey

A guide to how your three days come together, and how our Pillar Directors shape it around you.

The Rhythm of Your Retreat

Your three days follow a deliberate arc: settling in, going deeper, and integrating what you've found. Rather than a fixed script, each day is shaped in real time by our Pillar Directors, based on how your particular cohort is responding, what you need more of, and where the group is ready to go next. Two cohorts rarely look identical, because two groups of people never are.

Arrival Evening

You'll settle into your villa, meet your fellow guests, and ease into the rhythm of Ubud with a gentle first Yoga session and a welcome dinner together as a group. Nothing is asked of you yet, beyond arriving.

The Middle Days

Each day moves through Yoga, Mindfulness, Pilates, Nutrition, and Coaching in a sequence designed so that one pillar prepares you for the next. Some sessions are shared as a group; others, like your Coaching time, are one-to-one and entirely private. There is also space built in for rest, optional treatments, and a group excursion into Ubud itself.

How each session unfolds on the day is intentionally left to your Pillar Directors' judgment. If your group needs longer in stillness, Mindfulness will take that time. If the coaching conversation runs deep, the day flexes around it. This is a considered choice: real transformation rarely happens on a rigid clock.

Closing Day

Your final day is about integration, not just conclusion. You'll move through a last physical practice, a group coaching session to translate insight into action, and a closing circle before departure. What you leave with is meant to travel home with you, not stay behind in Bali.

Ayurveda - Pre-Programme Checklist

Guided By Those Who Live the Practice

Your Pillar Directors are not instructors reading from a manual.

- ❖ Bianca has practised yoga since 2012 across the Jivamukti and Ashtanga Vinyasa traditions.
- ❖ Toby has taught meditation since 1993, originally trained as a Buddhist monk, and now advises organisations including INSEAD and Google.
- ❖ Nadia brings 7 years of Pilates expertise across mat, reformer, and injury-aware movement.
- ❖ Marc is an ICF-certified coach with fifteen years guiding executives and individuals through lasting change.

Together, they adapt the programme to exactly who is in the room.

Before You Arrive

You'll receive a short pre-retreat questionnaire covering your movement background, any physical considerations, and your goals. This lets your Pillar Directors tailor sessions to you specifically, whether you're new to yoga or a seasoned practitioner.

Please disclose any injuries, conditions, or relevant health information honestly and in confidence. Our Pilates Director has specialist training in injury-aware movement, and modifications are always available.

If you are currently working with a therapist, coach, or psychiatrist, or navigating an acute mental health period, we ask you to speak with your treating practitioner first and have an honest conversation with us, your well being comes before your participation.
